

Josip Tavčar

Josip Tavčar, MSc., is interdependent system researcher with various interdisciplinary experiences, mostly in integral management of socially responsible sustainable (regional) development planning of well-being and well-being tourism and consequences of their interdependency, interactions and emerging synergies by linking: systemic thinking, socially responsible sustainable development planning, innovation, quality, entrepreneurship and environmental assessments as a framework for a novel concept, strategy and policy tools of related systemic interdependence processes. In the name of CIMRS – Centre for Interdisciplinary and Multidisciplinary Research and Studies of University of Maribor he was managing proposals for European Union Research Framework Programs especially for Western Balkan Countries and Slovenian national Programs. For that purpose he founded Partner Consortium of Excellence. He was a founder member, member of presidency and representative of Council of Europe - Embassy of Local Democracy - Coordinating network of regional centers for Western Balkan Countries inter-city and inter-regional collaboration projects on: education, science, culture and art, economy, ecology, environment protection and tourism. He is M.S. in Technical environment protection in the field of optical (physical, chemical and meteorological aspects) and laser remote sensing of polluted open atmosphere, concerning climate change, sustainable development, transport ecology, energetic, process industry, innovative green and sustainable technologies. He realized more than 260 pure art, informative, educational, promotional exhibitions (realized ideas), integrating science and art, culture and economy to initiate awareness of Space, Earth, nature: environmental, cultural and technical protection inheritance, climate change, ecology, environment protection, science, innovation, architecture, transport, urbanism, spatial planning, sustainable development, social responsibility, tourism, pure art, culture, education. He actively participated at many conferences, congresses, symposiums, seminars, campuses and trainings on different fields of science (more than 220) and art to interact their systemic interdependency and synergy. He was director of SEM Institute for Climate Change - Sustainable Future Activities, member of Slovenian Systems Research Society and is member of IRDO – Institute for Social Responsibility Development. He is co-founder of Green Touristic cooperative Štatenberg responsible for: natural, cultural and technical heritage, WELLFEELING and WELLFELING tourism, Social responsible sustainable development, sustainable future activities also by informal actions through integrating science and art, culture and economy interdependency.