

Sean Ivan Nolimal, student of economy

Was born in Denver, Colorado, USA: He attained his High school Diploma/ IB certificate in USA at South High school in Denver, Colorado and Slovenia, Gimnazija Bežigrad (International Baccalaureate) in 2005. He started his theoretical and practical research in economic and ethical fields by being the student of business and economy at Gea College, Ljubljana, Slovenia, University of Colorado Boulder, Colorado USA and is currently the student at Faculty of Economy at University of Ljubljana. His interest is focused on international marketing and strategy, and the comparison of the USA vs. European political economy. He has also many practical work experiences in the business and ethical field (was responsible for selling various products and continuously achieved positive performance evaluations; as a mentor volunteer, he mentored few children from disadvantaged households, encouraging them to stay in education). His research interests include the principles of scientific management, human relations movement, corporate social responsibility and ethical philosophy. He has excellent social skills and is good at creating discussions and conversations, combining business and social responsibility. He is co-author of several scientific articles in the field of organizational behavior and public health in Slovenia.