INVITATION – CALL FOR PAPERS: 17th IRDO International Conference, SOCIALLY RESPONSIBLE SOCIETY
2022: Green, digital and inclusive transition: how to make it happen?
2-3 June 2022, Maribor, Slovenia, EU, ONLINE, www.irdo.si , info@irdo.si

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

you are kindly invited to participate at the 17th IRDO International Conference “SOCIALY RESPONSIBLE SOCIETY 2022: Green, digital and inclusive transition: how to make it happen?”, to be held on 2 and 3 June 2022 online.

We invite you kindly to participate with your own author’s contribution (paper) and / or as listener.

In 2021 we all recognised that the current global environmental-socio-economic-political crisis is killing humankind. All of us need to accept this fact and the fact that all of us must and can help ourselves solve this crucial danger in order to survive as the current and coming generations. No action for more sustainability is too small, all are urgent.

“The alarm bells are deafening, and the evidence is irrefutable: greenhouse gas emissions from fossil fuel burning and deforestation are choking our planet and putting billions of people at immediate risk.” (UN Secretary-General António Guterres, 2021)

The main purpose of the conference is to explore conceptual framework(s), conditions and possibilities for a green, digital and inclusive transition that enables the development of a common sustainable future, in line with the UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its 17 SDGs. A precondition for sustainable coexistence is socially responsible behaviour of each stakeholder in the community.

Without broad environmental and social responsibility, there is no survival of humanity. Social responsibility is a tool for achieving sustainable future, connecting and integrating several other mechanisms. Sustainability is increasingly regarded as a process of societal and inclusive transitions.

Despite broad commitment to the UN 2030 Agenda and the EU spearheading its implementation (6 Commission priorities for 2019-24), recent reports at various levels alert that several SDGs are not being achieved. Among them, the European environmental report SOER 2020 (EEA, 2019) sums up that Europe continues to consume more resources and contribute more to environmental degradation than other world regions.

The conference emphasis is on implementation of a green, digital and inclusive transition as embraced by the European Green Deal \(EGD\) and other EU priorities and policies, including the Recovery and Resilience Facility/Plans. The EGD puts sustainability and, therefore, social responsibility at the heart of the EU policy-making, reflecting the need for systemic change.

The implementation of the European environmental vision (“Living well, within the limits of our planet”) necessitates a systemic change of the development model, namely placement of fundamental socio-economic systems within the boundaries of ecosystems (ecosystem-based approaches) (SOER 2020). To achieve the SDGs, fundamental transformations of societal systems (energy, mobility, food and built environment systems) that are at the root cause of environmental and climate pressures are urgently needed – i.e., through profound changes in dominant structures, practices, technologies, policies, lifestyles, and thinking (knowledge systems). The complex nature of the sustainability challenges requires a new policy response with the multi-level perspective on transitions and catalysing innovation and system change.

INVITATION – CALL FOR PAPERS: 17th IRDO International Conference, SOCIALY RESPONSIBLE SOCIETY 2022: Green, digital and inclusive transition: how to make it happen?
2-3 June 2022, Maribor, Slovenia, EU, ONLINE, www.irdo.si, info@irdo.si

Sustainability transitions are non-linear, society-wide processes toward low-carbon, circular and bio-economy, and society, built on innovation and knowledge creation. Changing trajectory will depend critically on the emergence and spread of diverse forms of innovation that can trigger new ways of thinking and living. The seeds for this shift already exist. More and more businesses, entrepreneurs, researchers, city administrations and local communities are experimenting with different ways of producing and consuming.

Key reports by the European Environment Agency on sustainability transitions:

- SOER, 2020 (2019)
- Knowledge for Action (2021)
- Reflecting on Green Growth (2021).

At the level of strategic ambitions and aspirations, under the EGD, the current policy landscape responds well to the need for systemic transformations (Knowledge for Action, EEA, 2021). Compared to previous policy packages, these strategies and initiatives mainly take a broader system perspective, including links to the global dimension, reflecting a new understanding of sustainability challenges and responses that embrace the need to address the root causes of unsustainability. This trend towards a more integrated and holistic approach is also reflected in a stronger integration of environmental, social and economic objectives, including aspirations regarding financial investments (e.g., biodiversity), social justice (e.g., climate adaptation) and behavioural change (e.g., mobility).

While the new policy landscape provides an initial roadmap, more detailed policy responses continue to be developed, translating short-, medium- and long-term ambitions into actions where implementation is underway. Among them, also the new EU Taxonomy on Sustainable Finance that will guide financial markets towards investing in sustainability. See more at: https://ec.europa.eu/info/business-economy-euro/banking-and-finance/sustainable-finance/eu-taxonomy-sustainable-activities_en.

EU has adopted a number of guidelines for the development of digitalization, they are focused on socially responsible development and integration of digitalisation in the society, and as indispensable element of sustainability transitions.

Some of them are available here:

- <https://www.europarl.europa.eu/factsheets/en/sheet/64/digital-agenda-for-europe>
- <https://ec.europa.eu/jrc/en/research-topic/digital-living>
- https://ec.europa.eu/growth/industry/corporate-social-responsibility_en

The basic vision of well-being for all while maintaining a healthy natural environment is also at the core of the model for an Integral Green Europe that is smartly integrating multiple EU potentials for sustainable development. Sustainability transitions, as the key processes of the European Green Deal, are integrally connected to other policies of the European Union, by placing fundamental values, underlying the European cultural heritage, in the centre of the model, rooting sustainable development in nature and community, and revisiting the economic paradigm. The proposal for an Integral Green Europe is depicted in 90 contributions on the platform for the Conference on the Future of Europe: <http://integralna-zelena-slovenija.si/en/ig-europe/>.

With the conference in 2022, we want to explore in terms of green, digital and inclusive transition what young people, researchers, teachers, experts, managers and everyone else can do together and what we should do to include personal, business and social responsibility in the social and natural environment where we operate.

Therefore, we shall contribute to a sustainable future as a way out of the current crisis, particularly in terms of challenges and opportunities opened up by implementation of green, digital and inclusive transition:

- Discuss methods for developing personal responsibility concepts to keep pace with current developments in green, digital and inclusive transition.
- Focus on how to respond to challenges of green, digital and inclusive transitions with the necessary integrated development in the social, ecological and business environment, with special emphasis on reflective behaviour, interdependence and creative collaboration in order to maximise integrity levels.
- Highlight examples of a green, digital and inclusive transition in the socially responsible behaviour in business, government and non-governmental organizations or active citizenship – how did they / shall we make it happen? and to assess how to rethink the standard processes from multiple perspectives, and how to integrate socially responsible behaviour into them.
- Explore the possibilities of how to influence the implementation of a green, digital and inclusive transition and its integration into responsible personal, business and social behaviour.

By exchanging experiences, both theoretical and practical, especially from the point of view of green, digital and inclusive transition, the participants will help finding the right path to socially responsible behaviour. Social responsibility and a sustainable future are sources of great benefits, as has been shown in all crises so far, including the covid-19 one.

Therefore, we kindly invite you to participate at the conference as authors and / or listeners, to share your experiences, views and suggestions with other participants, including researchers, top consultants, other experts and experienced practitioners who will attend this conference. Young authors, high school and university students involved in educational processes are very welcome, too.

We kindly invite you to present your original papers and report about your own work in various topics of our conference! So far, over 1.500 authors from all over the world have participated in the previous 16 IRDO conferences. The number of speakers is limited.

Please send us your application form as soon as possible to the e-mail address: info@irdo.si.

We are looking forward to your participation in the 17th IRDO International Conference ONLINE!

INVITATION – CALL FOR PAPERS: 17th IRDO International Conference, SOCIALLY RESPONSIBLE SOCIETY 2022: Green, digital and inclusive transition: how to make it happen?
2-3 June 2022, Maribor, Slovenia, EU, ONLINE, www.irdo.si, info@irdo.si

CONFERENCE PURPOSE

In the current world, we find many social contradictions and negative traits; authors (e.g., Schwab, 2016; Piketty, 2013) are pointing out that better adapted and faster responses to the consequences of the rapid development of science and technology are essential. Due to the speed of development, we are facing challenges that are crucial for a sustainable future and our existence.

Measures should be systemic, necessary, and sufficiently comprehensive, i.e., interdisciplinary, transdisciplinary and trans-sectoral, in order to prevent the negative consequences of uncontrolled, incomplete development, support the "4th industrial revolution" and to improve the current socio-economic systems towards comprehensive social responsibility. We are well aware that constructing a more resilient and sustainable socio-economic model that is less dependent on growth will also require a shift in the economic paradigm (Reflecting on Green Growth, EEA, 2021).

Therefore, the 2022 IRDO conference "Green, digital and inclusive transition: how to make it happen?" should help us find a path to responsible future of the world in the 21st century, aligned with the 17 United Nations Sustainable Development Goals of Transforming our World: The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

Implementation of a green, digital and inclusive transition is set as a central theme of the IRDO 2022 conference because of its exceptionally strong impact on the nature, economy and society at various levels, from personal to global.
